michael jacobs is the author of key texts such as psychodynamic counselling in action and the presenting past looking back over fifty years experience as a therapist and reflecting on some forty years as a supervisor and teacher he invites you to join him and reflect upon issues uncovered in the therapy room therapists are encouraged to engage in reflective practice thinking through what they are saying and doing together with presenting their work in supervision in order to engage in fine tuning their insight and skills however it is hard to find the time with so many demands pressing in michael presents various situations phrases and practices which may evade reflection since they are so common in the consulting room or which may challenge assumptions that easily become habitual in a therapist s practice he unpacks apparent conventional phrases such as how are you did you see and he says the unsayable looks at the place of cpd questions expertise the impact of failure freud s cigars expectations on the therapist being a therapist the value of apologies letting be niggles the vicissitudes of memory the pointlessness of questions what therapists miss hopes goals taboos finishing therapy money notes and many many more significant possibilities that arise in the course of a week s regular sessions this beautiful little book contains space within for your own notes thoughts and reflections after each reflection from michael this gives you the opportunity to ponder to savour to develop or disagree on the ideas you encounter take your time slow down and allow your thoughts to grow phantom limbs and body integrity identity disorder discusses the conditions of phantom limb syndrome and body integrity identity disorder together for the first time exploring examples from literature film and psychoanalysis to re ground theories of the body in material experience the book outlines the ways in which pls and biid involve a feeling of rupture underlined by a desire for wholeness using the metaphor of the mirror box a therapeutic device that alleviates phantom limb pain to examine how fiction is fundamentally linked to our physical and psychical realities using diverse examples from theoretical and fictional works including thinkers such as sigmund freud jacques lacan maurice blanchot d w winnicott and georges perec and films by powell and pressburger and quentin tarantino each chapter offers a detailed exploration of the mind body relationship and experiences of fragmentation bodily ownership and symbolic reconstitution by tracing these concepts the monograph demonstrates ways in which fiction can enable us to understand the psychosomatic conditions of pls and biid more thoroughly while providing new ways of reading psychoanalysis literary theory and fictional works the first book to analyse biid in relation to pls phantom limbs and body integrity identity disorder will be essential reading for academics and literary readers interested in the body psychoanalysis english literature literary theory film and disability this book presents an in depth wide ranging and rigorous investigation of winnicott s central theory of maturational processes and its interrelation with psychic disorders it provides the framework from which different aspects of the study of human nature can be developed the author s explanations of freudian terms are much more understandable than many i have read the book will be welcomed by those seeking a good introduction to freud and by others who already know him for some of its new perspectives and interesting insights even for non freudians there is much to learn from his pursuit of understanding and jacobs book helps us both in our own search for meaning and in appreciating why freud continues to be a major milestone in it counselling the journal of the british association for counselling in refreshing contrast to most other titles on sigmund freud the founding father of psychoanalysis this book is distinctive in the accessible nature of its

this book is an interdisciplinary study of the human drama of replacement is one s irreplaceability dependent on surrounding oneself by a replication of others is love intrinsically repetitious or built on a fantasy of uniqueness the sense that a person s value is blotted out if someone takes their place can be seen in the serial monogamy of our age and in the lives of replacement children children born into a family that has recently lost a child whom they may even be named after the book investigates various forms of replacement including ai and doubling incest and bedtricks imposters and revenants human rights and surrogacy and intertextuality and adaptation the authors highlight the emotions of betrayal jealousy and desire both within and across generations on replacement consists of 24 essays divided into seven sections what is replacement law society wayward women lost children replacement films the holocaust and psychoanalysis the book will appeal to anyone engaged in reading cultural and social representations of replacement an essential feature of successful counselling is the ability to listen and respond well to the information being given in an interview in this book the author shows how this ability may take away the need for leading and advising creating a counselling encounter that is constructive and helpful leaders whether clerical or lay teachers or managers doctors or social workers frequently see their role as one of communication but in the excitement of communicating forget that theirs are not the only important voices the primary purpose of this book is to emphasize the necessity of learning to listen as well as to speak and to respond to what is said and what is omitted knowledge is never static it is always open to revolutionary thinking or to evolving development similarly an individual s knowledge is always moving and indeed if the ability to think about ideas is lost an important part of the individual is also lost in this book a collection of some of the papers and lectures written by michael jacobs over a period of thirty or more years the author shows his own thinking at work as he challenges himself to look deeper at some important aspects of his discipline principally psychodynamic psychotherapy although always with reference to other forms of discourse such as literature and theology here the reader will find the writer behind those popular texts such as the presenting past psychodynamic counselling in action and shakespeare on the couch most therapists regardless of theoretical approach intuitively recognize that their sense of self intimately influences their work using this elemental truth as a launching pad rowan and jacobs articulate the different avenues through which the self informs therapy and how each can be used to improve therapeutic effectiveness along the way the authors provide a masterful exposition of transference countertransference and projective identification throwing much needed light on topics that have long been mired in controversy and confusion the book is a priceless resource for experienced therapists and those just beginning the journey professor sheldon cashadan author of object relations therapy and the witch must die the hidden meaning of fairy tales outstandingly in the current literature this book meets the conditions for integrative psychotherapy to fulfil its undoubted potential as the therapy pathway of the future much has to change in our field first people have to become better informed and more respectful of other traditions than their own engaging with all kinds of taboo topics next vigorous but contained dispute has to take place without having a bland synthesis as its goal finally the current situation in which integration runs in one direction only humanistic and transpersonal therapists learning from psychoanalysis has to be altered rowan and jacobson each a master in his own field have done a wonderful collaborative job the book's focus on what different ways of being a therapist really mean in practice guarantees its relevance for therapists of all schools or none and at every level andrew samuels professor of analytical psychology university of essex and visiting professor of psychoanalytic studies goldsmith's college university of london there is no question in psychotherapy more important than the degree to which the practitioner should be natural and spontaneous would it be sensible to leave one's ordinary everyday personality behind when entering the consulting room and adopt a stance based on learned techniques this is the question addressed by rowan jacobson in the therapist's use of self approaching it from various angles and discussing the relevant ideas of different schools of thought the authors are very well informed and write with admirable clarity directness and wisdom and have made an impressive contribution to a problem to which there is no easy solution dr peter lomas author of doing good psychotherapy out of its depth this book deals with what is perhaps the central question in therapy who is the therapist and how does that actually come across and manifest itself in the therapeutic relationship a good deal of the thinking about this in psychoanalysis has come under the heading of countertransference much of the thinking in the humanistic approaches has come under such headings as empathy genuineness nonpossessive warmth presence personhood these two streams of thinking about the therapist's own self provide much material for the bulk of the book but other aspects of the therapist also enter the picture including the way a therapist is trained and uses supervision in order to make fuller use of her or his own reactions responses and experience in working with any one client the book is aimed primarily at counsellors and psychotherapists or trainees in these disciplines it has been written in a way that is accessible to students at all levels but it is also of particular value to existing practitioners with an interest in the problems of integration a person's past is ever present from infancy to old age and it always affects the dynamics of therapy and the therapist patient relationship written by one of the most cited counseling authors in europe the bestselling the presenting past gives practicing therapists and students keen insight into the subject the theories of freud winnicott klein and others are organized into three main categories trust and attachment authority and autonomy and cooperation and competitiveness lavishly illustrated and updated to give the most complete picture available on the subject this edition of
